

Review this information carefully before making the decision to enroll in summer classes. To avoid taking on additional debt, Student Registration and Financial Services (SRFS) recommends that you attend summer classes only if absolutely necessary.

Applications must be received by the appropriate application deadline:

- If you want to receive notification of summer aid eligibility prior for Summer Session I, you must submit your application by May 1, 2022.
- If you want to receive notification of summer aid eligibility prior for Summer Session II, you must submit your application by June 4, 2022.
- Applications submitted after deadline will not be accepted and financial assistance will not be available for summer costs.

Eligibility

To be considered for federal or institutional aid to attend summer school, you must meet the following criteria:

- Be registered for a minimum of 2 credit units (CU) throughout summer 2022.

1 CU in Summer Session I + 1 CU in Summer Session II

or

2 CU in Summer Session I or 2 CU in Summer Session II

NOTE: Students who are enrolled in fewer than 2 CU and are requesting assistance should still submit this application so SRFS can officially determine your options. You will likely be referred to federal and/or alternative loans.

- Be a continuing student enrolled in a Penn undergraduate program
- Be enrolled in courses that are applied to your degree
- Not be in default on a federal or Penn student loan
- Received need-based financial aid from Penn in 2021-2022

Summer School Information

Financial Aid

Penn's grant-based undergraduate financial aid program does not extend into summer sessions, and students should understand in advance that most aid will be available in the form of federal or private student loans. Students can learn more about summer financial aid on the Student Registration & Financial Services website.

Federal Work-Study

If you are planning to enroll in classes and also want Federal Work-Study, you should complete the Federal WorkStudy application available on the Student Employment website at <https://srfs.upenn.edu/student-employment>. The Federal Work-Study application will be available on the SRFS website at the end of April 2022. You must also submit your 2021-2022 and 2022-2023 FAFSAs. If you decide to participate in the Federal Work-Study Program during the summer, your ability to borrow loan funding might be affected.
